Reds Throw Cold Water On Plan To End Atmosphere Nuclear Tests

SMALLPOX VACCINATIONS — Mrs. Amelia Alduzuval of Brooklyn, N. Y., is given smallpox vaccination as others wait turn in New York City Health Department headquarters as the city continued program to combat possible spread of the disease known to have attacked a Canadian boy. Many persons came in contact with the youth as he passed through city on way to Toronto from Brazil. (AP Wirephoto)

Doctors Agree; No Fear Of Smallpox Epidemic

NEW YORK (AP)—A Brazilian doctor's rubber-stamp approval of an outdated smallpox vaccination certificate was said Monday to have opened the way for a teen-age Canadian boy's pestilential journey across two continents.

In the wake of the youth's fever-wracked passage, nearly 3,000 persons who made casual contact with him underwent vaccinations as public health authorities sought to prevent any spread of his smallpox, the first case reported in the United States and Canada in 15 years.

However, in Toronto, where the boy, James William Orr, 14, was resting comfortably in a hospital isolation ward, Dr. Matthew Dymond, Ontario health minister, declared:

"There is not, in our opinion, any cause for alarm and neither is there any fear of an epidemic at the present time."

Young Orr arrived from Brazil with his missionary parents Aug. 11 en route to their home in Canada. He spent 8½ hours in New York before boarding a train to Toronto.

Immigration regulations in the U.S. and Canada require vaccination not more than three years before entering either country. However, Orr's mother, Mary Emma, told the Toronto Star that the family last was vaccinated seven years ago.

Aware of the regulations, Mrs. Orr said the family went to a medical officer in Brazil before leaving by plane for New York. The newspaper quoted her as saying:

"That medical officer is a very, very busy man and I hate to say anything against him because we hope to go back there in a year.

Official Stamp

"He said, 'once you've been vaccinated, you're vaccinated for life. I'll give you the certificates but I will not re-vaccinate you.' Apparently the New York authorities accepted the vaccination certificates because they had the doctor's official stamp."

Dr. Erwin Drescher, chief of quarantine at Idlewild Airport, denied any laxness on the part of his service.

"We have the best quarantine service in the world," he said. "Anybody could have presented a fraudulent $20 bill or any other fraudulent document. However, I do not know that this was the case since I have not seen the vaccination certificate."

In Ottawa, the Canadian Health Department said the Orr boy's admissibility to Canada was based on his clearance by health officials in New York.

Arrived Aug. 11

The boy, his parents, and a sister and brother flew into Idlewild about 12:15 p.m. on Aug. 11. They took a cab to Grand Central Terminal and spent 8½ hours in the waiting room before boarding their train to Toronto.

The boy was already ill on arrival in Toronto but it was not until last Saturday that a diagnosis indicated smallpox and American authorities were alerted.

With no shortage of smallpox serum on hand, more than 2,450 New Yorkers already have undergone precautionary vaccinations, including 500 airline and airport personnel at Idlewild.

Berlin Wall Violence Continues

BERLIN (AP) — Thousands of enraged West Berliners trying to storm the despised Communist "wall of shame" battled police along a mile and a half stretch of the border area Monday night.

It was the bloodiest outbreak of violence since the Reds built the antirefugee barrier a year ago.

The demonstrators also kept up attacks on Soviet vehicles, stoning a Russian army bus and injuring at least one Soviet soldier.

Amid the violence came warnings from both the United States and Russia that continued outbursts at the wall could have serious consequences extending beyond Communist-encircled West Berlin.

Rioting has erupted daily since East German guards shot a young refugee on the wall Friday, leaving him to die slowly on the East Berlin side while U.S. troops and West Berlin police looked on from the West.

At one point during the evening, more than 5,000 demonstrators surging toward the wall clashed with West police. Reinforced police units, supported by water cannon, finally dispersed the crowd.

Officials said a score of demonstrators were hurt and 10 policemen were injured, several seriously enough to be hospitalized.

The main battle occurred near U.S. Checkpoint Charlie at the border.

Police also clashed with nearly 1,000 demonstrators at Moritzplatz, about a mile and a half southeast of the checkpoint.

The crowd, shouting "Mauer muss weg" (the wall must go), hurled rocks and firecrackers at the West police.

The clash with the police and the attack on the Soviet bus occurred within a few blocks of each other in the area around Checkpoint Charlie.

Police Reinforcements

Police brought up new reinforcements and, with 400 men in the fray, drove the demonstrators back in three charges, their clubs swinging. The water cannon exhausted their tanks and had to refuel.

A police spokesman said one of his men was hurt badly enough to be hospitalized.

He said eight demonstrators were held for resisting police orders.

The spokesman would not estimate the number of demonstrators hurt. Reporters saw two on the ground, being clubbed and kicked by the police.

Police succeeded in pushing the crowd back more than two blocks from the Friedrichstrasse, where Checkpoint Charlie is located.

Three Killed In Accident On Turnpike

FANNETTSBURG, Pa. (AP)—Three persons were killed Monday when their car blew a tire and crashed into the side of a tractor trailer along the Pennsylvania Turnpike, three miles east of the Willow Hill Interchange. Three others were injured.

The dead were taken to the Fulton County medical center in McConnellsburg. Hospital officials were unable to determine their identities immediately.

One of the injured—a six-year-old girl—was taken to the Chambersburg Hospital in critical condition.

State police at the Newville substation said the car blew a tire, swerved to the opposite lane, bounced off a concrete bridge abutment, then crashed into the side of the truck. The truck plunged over a 100 foot embankment.

Truck driver Robert Quesenberry, 38, of Augusta, Ill., was rushed to the McConnellsburg medical center in serious condition. His companion, John Nelson, 38, of Huntsville, Ill., also was hospitalized.

May Be Another Hearing On Marshall's Judgeship

WASHINGTON (AP)—The possibility of another hearing on Thurgood Marshall's judgeship nomination developed Monday and a move began to take the case away from a Southern-dominated senate Judiciary subcommittee.

Chairman Olin D. Johnston, D-S.C., said more witnesses may be called to check on conflicting statements made at Monday's hearing—the fifth on President Kennedy's nomination of Marshall, a Negro, to the Second Circuit Court of Appeals.

This brought sharp protests from Sens. Kenneth B. Keating, R-N.Y., and Philip A. Hart, D-Mich., who as members of the full judiciary committee sat in on Monday's hearing.

Keating called the procedure ridiculous and un-lawyerlike. He served notice he intends to ask the full committee to take the nomination out of the subcommittee's hands.

Hart said the Senate is indicting itself by delay in confirming Marshall.

Johnston said the subcommittee will decide whether to take testimony from two Memphis, Tenn., newspapermen who wrote stories about a Marshall speech at Memphis on Feb. 2, 1956, and from Dr. Alfred H. Kelly of Wayne State University, Detroit.

Marshall, former chief counsel for the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, said last Friday he was misquoted in accounts of the speech.

Subcommittee counsel L. P. B. Lipscomb said stories of the talk were written by Paul Molloy of the Memphis Commercial Appeal and Clark Porteus of the Press-Scimitar.

The real fireworks Monday, however, centered on Kelly.

Lipscomb asked Marshall about a paper prepared by Kelly in which Marshall was quoted as saying:

"I want you to understand that when us colored folks take over, every time a white man draws a breath, he'll have to pay a fine."

"That has never been my conviction, is not now, and never will be," Marshall replied. He said Kelly had misquoted him.

RIO DE JANEIRO, Brazil (AP)—A Brazilian jetliner with 93 passengers and 10 crewmen aboard went out of control on takeoff Monday night and crashed into mist-shrouded Guanabara Bay.

Unofficial reports said there were a large number of survivors but no count was available immediately.

The plane, a Panair do Brasil DC8, was en route to Lisbon, Portugal.

Strike Settlement Flickers, Fades

HUNTSVILLE, Ala. (AP)—Hopes of getting the strike-troubled Marshall Space Flight Center back into operation Monday flickered briefly, then faded.

Despite an end to the picket line in compliance with part of a federal court order, only some of the workers showed up. Most of those left after staying around a short time.

Construction Stopped

For the most part, construction work at the giant rocket and space development center remained in idleness, stilled for the fifth straight working day by a dispute over non-union electricians.

Several of the nation's top-priority space projects — including work on the Saturn booster, a vital part of moonshot plans — were at a standstill.

The next step remained uncertain.

A spokesman for the space flight center said simply: "I don't know what happens next."

James Haygood, business agent of the electricians' local that started the walkout last week, said: "The union has removed picket signs and wishes to comply fully with the court order." He told members of the local, "You are free to report to work."

U.S. District Judge Clarence W. Allgood of Birmingham, who issued a five-day restraining order Friday night directing an end to the picketing, declined comment.

The strike started last Tuesday when 150 members of the International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers set up picket lines protesting the employment of several non-union electricians by a subcontractor.

Almost 1,200 members of building trades unions refused to cross the picket lines, bringing to a halt the construction work on the rocket and space projects.

Court Order

The National Labor Relations Board, at the request of the National Aeronautics and Space Administration and two private contractors, got the court restraining order a the end of the fourth day of the strike.

No further picketing occurred, but work normally was in recess over the weekend.

When no pickets appeared Monday morning and some early work crews showed up, the space flight center spokesman reported: "The first of the workers have returned, so we assume they all will return."

A short time later the center issued a statement saying that "virtually all" of the 150 electricians failed to appear at their construction sites.

The center added that while most of the more than 1,200 members of building trades unions did report for work, "most of them have by now left construction sites."

Neo-Nazis Sentenced To Jail

LONDON (AP) — Two of Britain's foremost neo-Nazis were sentenced to jail Monday for provoking crowd violence with an anti-Jewish tirade.

A two-months prison term was ordered for Colin Jordan, 39, a schoolteacher and self - styled "world fuehrer" of the British National Socialist Movement.

The "national secretary" of the movement, John Tyndall, was sentenced to six weeks. Both men were freed on bail of 100 pounds ($280) pending appeal.

The formal charge against them was insulting behavior whereby a breach of the peace could have been caused. It concerned an open air meeting at Trafalgar Square July 1 when a wild, fist-swinging riot resulted in more than 50 arrests.

Sample Remarks

Police gave these samples of remarks by Jordan and Tyndall which were held calculated to inflame the 5,000 onlookers:

"The Jew is like a poisonous maggot feeding on a body in an advanced state of decay'—Tyndall.

"On Sept. 3, 1939 (the outbreak of World War II), the blackest day in British history, the long and intensive Jewish campaign was crowned with success and the Jews of the world rejoiced"—Jordan.

"When the Jews realized that Germany and Adolf Hitler and national socialism had come to point the way to a new, peaceful order in Europe, they succeeded in mobilizing the lying propaganda of their press and the falsities of the concentration camp. They succeeded in mobilizing to our shame the rest of the world against Germany"—Tyndall.

Jordan was quoted as saying that the influx of colored migrants to Britain was plotted by Jews because "a mongrel population is essential to the long-term security of their overlordity.'

Jordan and Tyndall pleaded innocent. Jordan described his remarks as "a statement of fact and fair comment."

The two men appeared in court wearing the sunwheel badges of their movement. This was the group that entertained American Nazi Lincoln Rockwell at a countrywide rally two weeks ago.

New Radiation Belt Created By U. S. High Altitude Blast

WASHINGTON (AP) — The United States, having created a new radiation belt around the globe, seeks now to determine whether it will delay or otherwise impair the country's Mercury astronaut program.

Present evidence indicates that it will not, said a statement Monday by the Defense Department and the Atomic Energy Commission.

But they added that they are "making a detailed study to determine possible effects."

Also participating in this scientific study is the National Aeronautics and Space Administration, which handles the space-flight program.

The radiation belt, largely consisting of high energy electrons, was produced by the high-altitude nuclear device the United States exploded in the mid-Pacific July 9. These atomic particles, and the X-rays produced by them, could be a menace to any spaceman flying through them, unless he were suitably shielded.

However, the official statement said the "new radiation lies primarily above the path of current manned flights."

The belt varies in height above the earth, from perhaps 200 miles high at some points to 500 miles at others. Both these altitudes are greater than the manned space flights of the United States and Russia. The U. S. astronauts' orbits ranged from about 100 to 167 miles above the earth, while the range of the cosmonauts was about 100 to 145 miles.

The new belt was in existence at the time Soviet cosmonauts Andrian G. Nikolayev and Pavel R. Popovich made their recent twin flights. Dr. James A. Van Allen, expert on space radiation, said it could not be determined from present information whether they came close enough to the belt to be exposed to damaging amounts of radiation.

Nikolayev's orbit reached a high point of 141 miles and Popovich's 145 miles.

The fact that the radiation is above the manned orbits so far attempted, plus indications that the radiation is "decaying" or losing its punch rather rapidly, led to hopes that the Mercury astronaut program could go forward on schedule.

These facts, plus indications that the radiation is "decaying" or losing its punch rather rapidly, led to hopes that the Mercury astronaut program could go forward on schedule.

Next Shot Scheduled

At any rate, NASA said it was proceeding as before with its plans to launch Cmdr. Walter M. Schirra into a six-orbit flight late in September or early in October. However, informed sources said that the plans would have to be changed if the studies now under way reveal unacceptable hazards for Schirra.

The new belt, according to preliminary studies, is about 400 miles wide. It stretches around the globe above the geomagnetic equator. This equator follows roughly the geographic equator.

The new belt emerges in its upper reaches with the Van Allen Belt of natural radiation. Dr. James A. Van Allen, the scientist who discovered the natural belt, said the new one could possibly be a menace to space travellers.

Newspaper Offices Bombed In Spain

MADRID (AP) — A wave of bombing attacks which officials said could cause the Franco government to abandon its current campaign of liberalism hit two of Spain's largest cities Monday.

The bombs, all directed at newspaper offices, exploded in Madrid and Barcelona, with a toll of two persons injured and slight damage.

At the same time, labor officials in the Asturias coal mining areas said some 825 miners refused to work, forcing the closing of three mines in the Rio del Caudal chain, center of widespread and persistent strikes earlier this year. Among the miners' current demands is one for "the English working week," meaning Saturdays off.

Nuisance Campaign

Officials described the bombs as part of a "nuisance campaign" and said they were aimed more at creating attention and causing confusion than at doing real damage.

The first blast occurred in the Madrid plant of Editorial Catolica, a powerful publishing firm which prints Ya and various other newspapers. It was followed by a similar explosion at Pueblo, Madrid organ of the government-controlled trade union syndicates.

The third blast came several hours later at Barcelona, where a small bomb shattered display windows in the front of La Vanguardia, an independent pro-Catholic daily.

Find Second Bomb

A similar bomb exploded a day earlier near Ayete Palace in San Sebastian, where Gen. Francisco Franco and his family are due to spend part of their summer holiday. Franco was not here, though some of his family was. Police said a second bomb was found nearby, unexploded.

Earlier, bombs had been aimed at Catholic institutions and establishments and one exploded Aug. 12 in the Cathedral of the Valley of the Fallen, Franco's memorial to Spain's war dead.

"Regardless of where they are placed, these bombs represent a dangerous opposition to the government and to law and order," one official said. "At the same time they represent a dangerous threat to the efforts under way throughout the Government for greater liberalism."

Train Rails Out Of Line Three Feet

HARRISBURG (AP)— The engineer and fireman of the Pennsylvania Railroad train that wrecked last month, killing 19 people estimated Monday that the track at the point of derailment was as much as three feet out of line.

"You don't see rails like that in your everyday course of duties," fireman R. L. Friday, Columbia, testified at a joint hearing of the Interstate Commerce Commission and the Pennsylvania Public Utility Commission into the July 28 tragedy at nearby Steelton.

Engineer J. F. Shue of Royalton described with his hands how the rails appeared to him to veer to the left—toward the rest of the four-track main line—straightened out for a bit, then followed a wiggly line until it rejoined the normal line.

It appeared, Shue testified, that the ties also had shifted with the rail.

"I'd estimate it was three feet (off center)," Shue added. Friday, who followed Shue to the witness stand, concurred.

Plan Would End Radioactive Fallout

GENEVA (AP)—The Soviet Union Monday rejected a proposal for a ban on nuclear tests in the atmosphere to end radioactive fallout and lessen international tension.

The idea of a partial treaty had been advanced by Brazil.

As a somber backdrop to the stalemate at the 17-nation disarmament Conference, the Soviets set off another big nuclear blast in the current test series. Swedish scientists estimated it at from 10-12 megatons, equal to 10 to 12 million tons of TNT. Japanese scientists put it at 10 megatons.

Soviet Deputy Foreign Minister Vasily Kuznetsov emphatically told the 17-nation disarmament conference his country is interested in measures that deal with "all nuclear weapons tests."

Even before the 72nd session of the conference began, a Soviet delegation spokesman said a partial ban "will not settle the problem." He argued that the United States would go on testing underground, making military advances at the expense of the Soviet Union.

Faced with the drawn-out deadlock over a complete nuclear test ban, the United States made known over the weekend in Washington that a new position was being considered and might be introduced here before the conference recesses next month.

Brazilian Plan

A partial ban covering everything but underground tests was proposed by Brazil July 25 and subsequently endorsed by Sweden, another of the eight neutral powers at the conference, and Italy, a Western bloc member along with the United States, Britain and Canada.

A complete test ban treaty has been stalled by the controversy over compulsory international inspections. The Western position is that inspections are necessary to prevent cheating by testing underground. The Soviet Union opposes them as disguised spying.

After Kuznetsov talked only about a treaty affecting all types of testing, the prospects for a partial solution to the problem looked dim.

U.S. Delegate Arthur H. Dean and Kuznetsov did get together on a couple of questions. As cochairmen of the conference, they proposed that delegates recess from Sept. 1 to Nov. 12. This is to enable the discussion of test bans and disarmament to be transferred to the U.N. General Assembly meeting opening Sept. 18. A decision was deferred.

Two Agree

The two also agreed, at India's prompting, to consider an Indian proposal to get together on the key issue of site inspections under a test ban treaty.

Indian Delegate Arthur Lall claimed no basic differences remained between the two sides and with hard negotiating they could reach a compromise.

Change Of Venue Denied

POTTSVILLE, Pa. (AP) — Entertainer Lillian Reis Monday was denied a change of venue for her second trial for the John B. Rich burglary in 1959.

The petition of the 33-year-old former chorus girl — accused of masterminding the burglary—was denied unanimously by a four-judge panel in Schuylkill County Court.

Miss Reis' attorney, William J. Krencewicz of Shenandoah, said he will consult with his client and her Philadelphia lawyers to determine whether the decision will be appealed.

Krencewicz said he was caught by surprise by the decision, which was signed by President Judge James J. Curran and Judges Vincent Dalton, Harold L. Paul and Charles W. Staudenmeier. Staudenmeier presided at Miss Reis' first trial, last fall, which ended in a hung jury.

Krencewicz said the judges adjourned a hearing on the change-of-venue petition on July 31 with an announcement that they would set a date for further hearing. But no further hearing was held, he said.

Miss Reis gave five reasons for asking that her second trial be scheduled elsewhere — allegations that she cannot receive a fair and impartial trial here; that county residents are prejudiced against her; that there has been undue excitement of county residents over the case; that it has received excessive publicity; and that Dist. Atty. Harry W. Lightstone used the case in his campaign for office against John Lavelle, her attorney in the first trial.

Elect Bishop President Of World Union

SYDNEY, Australia (AP)—Bishop Clyde W. Meadows of Chambersburg, Pa., Monday was elected president of the World Christian Endeavor Union at the 14th world convention.

He succeeds retiring Dr. Daniel A. Poling, 77, of New York, who had held the position since 1927.

"I accept the world presidency very humbly," Bishop Meadows said. "I am following great men whom I cannot hope to match. I owe a great debt to Christian Endeavor and will do my best in the presidency."

The Rev. Dr. Meadows was pastor of the King Street United Brethren Church in Chambersburg from 1928 to 1961 and Pennsylvania superintendent of his denomination for 27 years.

Now 61, Bishop Meadows was born in Appomatox County, Va. He graduated from the Gettysburg Lutheran Theological Seminary in 1925 and received an honorary degree of doctor of divinity from Huntingdon (Ind.), College in 1940.

Presidency Fight Looms At Meeting

DETROIT (AP)—A fight for the American Federation of Teachers presidency loomed as a possibility Monday as the AFL-CIO teachers' union opens its 46th annual convention.

Incumbent President Carl J. Megel, who has headed the 70,000-member AFT for 10 years, indicated he was undisturbed, however. "We always have them," Megel, Chicago teacher on leave of absence from that city's public schools, commented with respect to the contests for the office.

Megel delivers his president's address Thursday in which he is expected to fire back at criticism of his union by the National Education Association.

The NEA, which has more than 80,000 members, takes the position that a school teacher has no right to go on strike. A New York affiliate of the AFT struck the New York public schools system last April 11. The strike lasted one day.

Other Candidates

Convention delegate groups entered the names of Herrick Roth of Denver, president of the Colorado Federation of Labor (AFL-CIO), and Myron Lieberman of Champaign, Ill., in bidding for nomination for president. The election will take place Wednesday.

Roth, a former teacher, was executive secretary of the Colorado Federation of Teachers for six years before becoming state federation president last June.

As federation president, he succeeded Denver postmaster George A. Cavender when President Kennedy appointed Cavender earlier this year.

Lieberman, a summer school teacher at the University of Illinois, has questioned the AFT's affiliation with the AFL-CIO. A New York City delegate group supporting Roth attacked Lieberman for this Monday in leaflets distributed at the convenion.

Dr. Herold C. Hunt of Harvard University urged the convention delegates to ask President Kennedy to make a task force to plan America's future education program so that it could deal properly with the "population explosion" and massed scientific and technological change in America and the world.

County Agent's Life And Work Are Full Of Variety

By Pat Williams
Daily Record Reporter

"BEING county agent is like being a general practitioner," John Withrow said yesterday. "We have to be able to answer questions and if we can't, then know where to get the answers."

Withrow became county agent for Monroe County with the Pennsylvania State University Agricultural Extension Service July 1, upon the retirement of Arthur Ifft.

"I've been in the county a little more than six weeks and have had a dog bite me," Withrow said. He related the incident as he sat at his desk in the extension office on the second floor of the Stroudsburg Postoffice building.

"I went to go into the barn to talk to the farmer," Withrow explained, "the dog evidently didn't know his master was in there and he wasn't about to let me in."

Withrow continued, "I'm not afraid of dogs and I thought I could 'bluff' my way past, but his chain was just long enough . . ."

Varied Experiences

The experiences of a county agent include a broad range of activities and meeting a large sampling of people of all ages. The job is actually a case of "out-of-school education for young and old to learn by doing," Withrow says.

Included in the broad job, Withrow said, are many questions which come to his office in relation to insect problems, growing lawns and farm produce, dairy herd improvement and affiliation with horse and pony clubs and 4-H clubs.

"We have a finger in lots of pies," Withrow said, reaching across the desk for a copy of the West End Fair booklet. "We were responsible for getting judges for many of the classifications in the fair. And this, the Pennsylvania Livestock Exposition," Withrow held up another booklet, "will be another project we are interested in adding.

Farming and like work, has been part of Withrow's background. He was born in 1922 on a farm near Canonsburg. There are 146 acres with a little of everything, but mostly dairy herd. Withrow's brother operates the farm now.

"I attended a one-room school for the first years of education, and then," Withrow said, "went into one of the first consolidated high schools, Trinity, in Washington. After that, I went on to Pennsylvania State University to major in agricultural education."

WW II Veteran

But, World War II intervened, and Withrow decided to enlist in the reserves. "We were all told that if we enlisted, we'd become officers," Withrow remembered, "but it didn't work out that way. With one semester to go, I was sent to take eight weeks of medical basic training at Little Rock, Ark. and from there to Hot Springs, for X-ray school."

Finally, the United States Army put Withrow into a position at the Utica, N. Y. Army General Hospital where he spent 18 months in X-ray and administration.

"That's where I met my wife, Ruth," Withrow said, "she was a secretary. We were about to have an engagement party when I got orders to go to Staten Island to work on the hospital trains."

Withrow and his wife, the former Ruth Bush, were married in 1945. The train trips with the injured coming home from overseas took him to Texas, Louisiana, Arkansas and Alabama. Ruth waited.

"Then, I went to Mississippi where I was to receive final training before being sent overseas. That was 1944," Withrow said. "I was interviewed and asked if I wanted to be sent to the Southwest." Withrow smiled, "I thought Southwest meant Southwest Pacific, and I was pretty surprised when I ended up at Los Alamos, New Mexico, in the Southwest United States.

"I was told that I'd remain there until the end of the war, but none of us knew how close that was," Withrow pointed out. "It was July 1945, and we were working on a small part of the work done for the atomic bomb."

"Looking back," Withrow said, "we were encouraged not to talk about our jobs, but if there were any parts of the bomb lying around, none of us recognized it." Withrow was in charge of the Chemical Metalurgy Research division with 11 members of the staff.

"We worked with precious metals; gold, silver, and platinum," Withrow said, "and some of our utensils were made of gold or silver — like crucibles and other laboratory equipment."

Stayed In Job

When Withrow was discharged, he stayed on in the same position for three years in the non-destructive testing research division. At that time, Withrow and two of his superiors wrote an article on radiography for a trade magazine comparing the values of the radioactive isotopes of tantalum and cobalt.

"We were setting up new techniques for production and using radiography to test the structure of the bomb," Withrow went on, "In the tests, we used a one million volt X-ray and the betatron which is actually a 20 million volt X-ray machine. We used them to look for flaws and air pockets in the components of the bomb."

Soon after this work, Withrow came to the conclusion that it was time he got back into agriculture, so he took a job with the Pennsylvania State Training School at Morganza. There, he was an instructor and worked with delinquent boys in raising poultry, swine and dairy herds in addition to general farm crops.

"I decided that I'd like to work in extension," Withrow said, "so I went to Harrisburg for an interview. It was too far to travel by car alone, so I took a bus."

"When the bus pulled into the station, it was the first one of the day," Withrow said, "and it was cold in the station. They'd had trouble with the heating system the night before. Something was still not working correctly. I opened the door to the men's lavatory, stepped in and passed out."

A concentration of carbon dioxide had accumulated in the enclosed space and Withrow ended up in the hospital, nearly asphixiated.

Agricultural Work

Working with the extension service in Cumberland and Perry Counties, Withrow became responsible for a whole list of jobs, means of helping and books full of information.

"During my work in those counties, the farmers formed a lamb and wool cooperative," Withrow said, "That way, they got the best price and best ranges for the products."

In relation to the many jobs that the county agent's office is doing, Withrow emphasized that his role is that of a catalyst. "We don't do the jobs, we aid people to begin their own programs and give them information to get further education or help in other areas."

John Withrow is many things to many people. "To a housewife who had trouble with insects, a man needing help with shearing Christmas trees, a farmer needing help with his feeding program; all these people look on me as being a different person," he said.

The reference to a doctor is quite true, Withrow has qualified as a general practitioner in agriculture. If he doesn't know the answer, he knows the specialist who does.

Home Economist

For the distaff side, Miss Margaret MacLaren, home economist of the Monroe County Agricultural Extension Association, works with the county agent in the woman's sphere of homemaking and gardening.

Between the two jobs involved, the offices are a clearing house for all types of information. The best use of land and people might easily be a framed motto for Withrow's desk.

"As soon as we sell our home in Carlysle," Withrow said, "my wife and two daughters, Barbara Ann, 12-years-old, and Nancy Lynne, five, will move into Monroe County. Then, we'll be county residents in addition to my being county agent."

Is Automation A Bogeyman Or Benefactor To Progress?

EDITORS NOTE — Is automation a bogeyman or a benefactor? Its electronic brains and robot machines have been around long enough for some early evaluations In the following first of three articles AP business news writer Darden Chambliss examines automation's works, good and bad.

By DARDEN CHAMBLISS
AP Business News Writer

NEW YORK (AP)—Automation is completing its first decade without working all the wonders or doing all the damage some had foreseen for it.

It was 10 years ago that a lawyer's son, fresh out of college, popularized the word and concept by publishing a book, "Automation: The Advent of the Automatic Factory." The author, John Diebold, was to become wealthy and internationally prominent as a top automation expert.

In the same year, Ford Motor Co. linked 71 machines into a line 1,600 feet long which took in rough castings at one end and, almost without human help, cranked out finished auto engine blocks at the other. This was to become the model for "Detroit automation," the robot production line.

Dates Back Years

The processes and concepts have roots dating back hundreds of years. But what Ford's plant and Diebold's book did was dramatize the system's potentialities and give it a separate identity.

Looking back, how has it fared so far, for better, or for worse?

Some said its electronic brains would solve traffic puzzles and could tip off national election results almost from the instant the polls close. But traffic is still a snarl and in 1960 one of the brainiest of these machines issued this crisp early election analysis: It's Nixon.

Still, industry officials say automation efficiency has helped pare the price of automatic washers, television sets and power lawnmowers, that it has helped electricity, gasoline and baby bottles withstand inflation.

Automation's complex control systems, making scores of delicate adjustments simultaneously in split seconds, have made it possible to extract unheard of plastics from the pressure cooker fractionating towers of the petroleum industry.

Working conditions, automationists say, are cleaner, more comfortable, safer and more rewarding where automation holds sway.

Different Opinions

But this will cause some to laugh mirthlessly. Where automation holds sway, jobs die, say the former packinghouse worker waiting in a Chicago unemployment office, the lathe operator making disappointing rounds in Detroit, the West Virginia coal miner idly staring into a sooty valley, the former steelworker drawing half his former pay at an Oil City, Pa., shoe factory.

Statisticians, granting these painful individual cases, say it doesn't appear that automation has actually thrown many people out onto the streets. At many plants and in most cases where offices were automated, normal resignations, retirements, marriages and transfers have painlessly whittled the work force down to the smaller size required. In 20 computer installations, for instance, almost 3,000 jobs were eliminated but only nine people actually were fired.

It's hard to tell in any case, which people who are out of work got there specifically because of automation.

Technically, automation usually means equipment with electronic brain or closed-loop systems for checking their own work and correcting themselves automatically when something goes a little out of whack.

Difficult To Tell

It is difficult to tell when a layoff results specifically from such systems, or mere mechanization, or from some other change—including changes in what products consumers buy.

But statisticians have noticed total employment in manufacturing decreased during the automation decade, while production increased. Some experts have estimated from this that using machines to boost workers' output eliminates about 200,000 jobs a year.

Statisticians have also noticed that hard-core unemployment—those people jobless for a year or more—have grown in recent years. The suspicion lurks that this is feeding on those groups least able to roll with automation's changes—the narrowly trained older workers, the undertrained young, the racially disadvantaged common laborer.

SAFE DRIVING TIPS
KEEP PENNSYLVANIA "THE SAFE DRIVER STATE"
By Staying Awake at the Wheel
No one ever fell asleep at the wheel deliberately. It happens to drivers who thought they could stay awake, even though they were tired. Don't risk dozing off as you drive—you may never awaken from such a nap!

Rest stops are important for safe driving. Take one at least every three hours. Drink coffee or tea, but avoid dangerous "pep" pills. When fatigue begins, drive off the road, away from traffic, and take a nap.

If every motorist had observed these common-sense suggestions last year, 2,298 accidents, and 67 fatal accidents might have been prevented!

Morse sent a telegram to his Republican counterpart, George I. Bloom asking that the two meet in the near future to explore the possibility of staging the debate.

Chess Club Has Busy Weekend

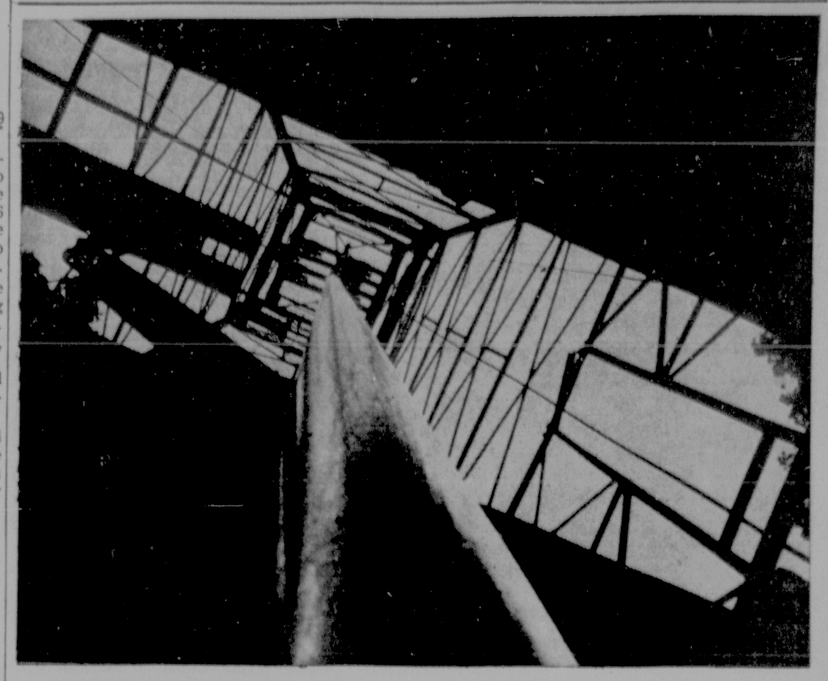

STROUDSBURG Chess Club members were slow in getting their weekend session going at at the Italian club and consequently there were not many contests but all were long and difficult.

In the business session, president Harold W. James stated he had located certain sets of chessmen and game boards left to the club by the deceased first president, John M. Price and he placed the same before the meeting.

In the playing, Robert Hickey, recognized as leader among the club's junior members, defeated President James twice and William Deering once. Earl Weiss, never-ceasing contender for club championships, should cellar Champion Louis Mondelle many of the little known chess maneuvers for quick victories, but Mondelle was no match for him.

Mondelle and Deering then started a contest for the French champ's title which kept them fighting hard until 9:50 when Mondelle was declared winner.

We have found from experience that a complete efficent service makes for reasonable prices without any sacrifice in quality or workmanship.

Special Privilege

"This country would still be in the dark ages economically if we permitted these opponents of progress and defenders of special privileges and interests to veto every forward move."

So said President Kennedy in his address to the people last week. Who was he talking about?

He identified those who opposed his discredited Medicare bill as "defenders of special privileges and interests." This is ironic. Medicare is a plan which would grant to some people the "special privilege" of having their medical bills paid by the tax money of others. Some of those who would receive this privilege are quite well to do, and some who would pay for it are quite poor.

Another group he placed in the scorned category were opponents of minimum wage increases. This is a law which attempts to confer the special privilege of having the law force an employer to pay more than the employee otherwise would earn. The history of this law, sadly, is that whatever the minimum wage is ordered to be it is never enough, because it helps—along with other governmental policies — to induce inflation that makes greater numbers of dollars worth no more than fewer dollars were before.

Such programs for "progress," as the President labeled them, are dear to the hearts of a "special interest" group called organized labor. This group, in turn, receives from the Government the "special privilege" of having immunity from antimonopoly laws, and the further "special privilege" of having the supposedly judicial National Labor Relations Board chaired by a man long noted for his leanings toward organized labor's point of view.

This administration has been unusually receptive to proposals to subsidize or confer advantages on all kinds of "special interests," ranging from favored small businessmen to certain geographical areas of the county. Quite often it has insisted on giving these Government handouts to interests reluctant to take them, such as the great majority of farmers.

The "economic dark ages" phrase was good politics, perhaps. But it didn't assay high in reality.

The Return To Real Life

Vacation endings are not without regrets. Pleasant, carefree days are over, leaving little but memories. One goes back home to the old familiar program in the well-known surroundings. Perhaps, if the truth were known, many return with a sense of relief.

In any case, persons are required to fit into the home environment, accept the discipline of responsible work, and continue important relationships with friends and neighbors. Such a situation offers the chance to begin again.

It is where one lives and works that one's life is tested. Here growth occurs if it occurs at all. The vacation is a pleasant interlude; real living takes place at home. The return to the familiar routine should inspire questions in those who desire to live fully.

Have I been doing a good job? Could I have done better? Have I a right to be satisfied with the progress I have made? How can I develop better relationships with those with whom I live and work? What weaknesses in myself should I begin at once to correct? How should I begin to insure more creative use of my talents and opportunities?

Surely no one but is capable of improving the quality of his life. Nearly every one is dissatisfied with some aspect of living. Now is the time to do something about it. Greater thoughtfulness, more careful planning, increased skillfulness in the details of the work, improved personal discipline and a more constructive attitude toward other people could mark real progress. The acceptance of moral responsibility and the return of religion are also in order. The end of vacation might well signal the beginning of life on a higher level.

The Scientific Elite

Small boys, when I was a small boy, talked base-ball and such. Now, they seem to be technologists. They know about space, about missiles, how to hot rod an automobile, and so on. Parents listen in astonishment at junior small talk which is really out of this world.

The fact of the matter is that the heroes of the day are Astronauts and to most, it matters little whether they are Americans or Russians or anything—they are the men who are doing the unbelievable. Also even kids know that science is a matter of team work. Nobody could get up there all on his own; he has to have a supporting team and lots of boys expect to be on that supporting team.

What President Eisenhower called a "scientific-technological elite," President Kennedy has incorporated into a government office, "The Office of Science and Technology." The federal government will spend $12,000,000,000 (billion) on research and development this year. This does not include what private industry is spending on R & D, as businessmen call it. Science has become a major government operation.

This is characteristic of a changed world. In fact, so technological have we become that our politicians, before they decide on their behavior, have surveys made and polls taken and the whole summarized by mechanical computers so that no one need think about right and wrong and morality and virtue.

It is like my mail. For something like 30 years, I have spent my Summers up here in Berkshire County in Massachusetts where I can read and study and renew myself. And during all those years, my mail was forwarded by the New York Post Office.

But lo and behold! This year improvements were made and the Post Office is becoming mechanized and it is using more automatic machinery and also the Post Office wants more money for stamps.

But on Wednesdays my mail does not come. On Wednesday, my mail goes to Falmouth in the Cape Cod area, about 160 miles away from here. Why does the mail go to Falmouth instead of to Otis? Because the Otis Air Force Base is there. I telephone to the mail clerk at the Air Force Base, at my own expense, and he very kindly forwards my mail to me.

Apparently somebody on a train or in Springfield, Massachusetts, cannot read on Wednesdays. He reads all other days, but Wednesday is his off day. Or maybe, it is all done by a machine which refuses to work on Wednesday.

I have a teletypwriter up here and one day on it came a message which I thought I should not have. I broke in to tell the sender that he had the wrong place. The sender had no sense of humor. It took a telephone official to convince him that either he or the machine or perhaps a pixie had made an error.

The real trouble with science is that is is difficult to evaluate. It takes a scientist to read the stuff and while he may be full of knowledge, he may have no wisdom. The government lets contracts to universities, contractors and to "think companies," as someone calls them.

The universities have been productive of enormous scientific knowledge which has been useful; contractors are especially good at testing, measuring, justifying. The "think companies" are a gamble and like my Wednesday mail loser, they may or may not be productive.

Really what President Kennedy has done has been to get the stuff into a responsible government office run by a government scientist, Dr. Jerome Wiesner, where the reports will be evaluated and the geniuses separated from the fakers. As most problems in modern science have to do with higher mathematics, most politicians cannot read the stuff or analyze its significance.

The work of the Office of Science and Technology is to be encouraged. It is part of the permanent Cold War which has become our lot. One of its problems is to have precise knowledge of exact science. Guessing will not do. We have to be absolutely right.

A missile must hit its target; there can be no second chance. A space ship must be where it should be. A new drug must cure, not kill. The Federal Drug Administration by one decision has earned all that has been spent on it. It is a new world we live in—a world of pin-point precision.

The Pennsylvania Story

Van Zandt Cites Major Aims

By Mason Denison

(In this exclusive "The Candidates Speak" series, Mason Denison has asked each of the eight statewide candidates—U.S. Senator, Governor, Lieutenant-Governor and Secretary of Internal Affairs—to express his, or her, views as to what they would "do" if elected, as in the case of the governorship: "As Pennsylvania's new Governor, I would——". What each has to say is presented herewith exactly as submitted—without benefit of any editorial blue pencil.)

By James E. Van Zandt
Republican Candidate,
U.S. Senate

Harrisburg—Through the generosity of Mason Denison, I have been given this opportunity to use this space to state "what I will do if I am elected to the United States Senate."

I cannot, of course, dwell on all the problems which might confront me in the Senate. Consequently, I will discuss two points recently described by my opponent as of primary interest to Pennsylvania voters in this campaign. While I do not necessarily agree that they are the biggest election issues, let me say to him, "I am glad you brought them up!"

First, there is unemployment. Certainly this is our State's biggest headache, one that has been with us for some time. Since little headway has been made in the reduction of unemployment by the present national administration, it is inescapably a campaign issue, both nationally and in Pennsylvania. The current jobless rate in Pennsylvania is 8.1 per cent (some 380,000 people) of the available work force and this approaches 50 per cent above the national average.

There is, of course, no single, sure cure for unemployment by government action. But there is one step toward a solution which could be taken and should have been taken before now and for which I will press in the Senate. I refer to a bill which I introduced in the present Congress to allow rapid tax write-offs on investments in new plants and equipment located in depressed areas of chronic unemployment.

Such an investment inducement, of course, would lead to thousands of new job opportunities where they are most needed, of which Pennsylvania has many.

My bill to accomplish this, H.R. 274, has been bottled up in the Democratic-controlled House Committee on Ways and Means since I introduced it 19 months ago. Neither the White House nor my opponent has lifted a finger to move it along. But we Republicans expect to make considerable gains out of the November election both in the House and Senate. At any rate, I can assure the people of Pennsylvania that, as their new Senator, I will be in there fighting for the consideration this measure deserves as an unemployment deterrent.

Another issue recently raised by my opponent is that of experience of the various candidates on the ballot this November. On that, first let me say that he has served less than six years in Congress while I have been there ever since 1938, except for military service in World War II. Second, my opponent stated that Pennsylvania should elect a Democrat Senator and Governor who would work closely with the Democrat President.

I do not believe Pennsylvanians want a one-party political system. Neither do I believe they want a "rubber stamp" Senator who faithfully submits to the dictates of any President. The people of our State are an independent breed who want their own views represented in Washington. This is the kind of representation they will have from me in the United States Senate.

There are a number of issues of vital importance to the people in this year's election campaign. They are by no means limited to those few which have been arbitrarily selected by my opponent. I intend to explore and discuss all of them throughout Pennsylvania between now and November 6.

Aid To Education Deadlock May Erupt

By Robert S. Allen and Paul Scott

Washington, August 21 — The long-sputtering federal aid-to-education issue is on the verge of erupting in a new acrimonious wrangle.

This time the cause of the threatening explosion is a reputed backstage plan to oust the Senate Democratic conferees who are adamantly refusing to give any ground in opposing federal grants to private colleges.

This group consists of Senators Wayne Morse, Ore., chairman, Lister Hill, Ala., Ralph Yarborough, Tex., Pat McNamara, Mich., and Jennings Randolph, W. Va.

Senator Joseph Clark, Pa., facing a tough re-election battle this year, also is a Democratic conferee, but is credited with siding with the three Republican conferees who are willing to accept the House bill approving grants to private colleges.

Republican members of the embattled conference committee are Senators Barry Goldwater, Ariz., Jacob Javits, N. Y., and Winston Prouty, Vt.

Senate and House conferees have been deadlocked over this legislation for months. Unless they can work out a compromise, and that in turn is accepted by the two chambers, no federal aid for education will be voted at this session of Congress.

This is the last possibility for that this year. If this measure remains stalemated in conference, then any kind of federal aid for education is dead until the new Congress convenes next year. Then all bills on this issue will have to start from scratch again, and go through lengthy committee hearings and other parliamentary procedure before they can be voted on.

For this reason, President Kennedy is personally making strenuous efforts to unravel the conference committee snarl and to enact some kind of education measure.

He has conferred individually with all of the Senate Democratic conferees in the hope of persuading them to ease their determined opposition to federal grants to private colleges. But the President has had no luck with any of th em — except Clark.

The Philadelphian not only agreed to go along, but proposed a compromise which he claims is agreeable to the President.

Exactly what it is is a mystery — at least to the Democratic conferees.

Clark has told these party colleagues he has a formula he believes will solve the impasse. But he has not disclosed its provisions. All he has told them is that he discussed it with the President, and he indicated willingness to accept it.

Include Us Out — That isn't enough for Senators Morse, Hill, Yarborough, McNamara and Randolph. They are making it emphatically clear they are not buying any pig in a poke.

Morse, with characteristic militancy, has gone further than that.

The scrappy Oregonian is flatly refusing to resume conferring unless assured Clark's compromise does not include "tampering with the Constitutional prohibition against federal aid to private schools."

"I have no intention of reconvening the conference committoee," Morse told Clark, "until I am certain it is not for the purpose of compromising the Constitution. The aid-to-education bill as passed by the Senate is legal, reasonable and fair. No one is more eager to pass this legislation than I am. But I will not compromise on fundamental principles, on this or any other issue."

Senator Hill vigorously backed Morse's stand.

"Federal grants to private colleges will pass only over my dead body," the Alabaman served notice. "Loans for building classrooms, yes; that's what the Senate voted and that's what we are insisting on."

This adamant stand has given rise to the backstage reports of a move to replace the five Democratic conferees with a more amenable group.

That will take some doing — a great deal more than is likely to get anywhere at this date and strife-torn stage of the session. Even under more normal conditions the odds would be heavy against such an unusual step being approved.

Now, all it's apt to produce is a loud and violent storm — and the final burial of this last remaining possibility of federal aid to education by this Congress.

Note: Originally, President Kennedy recommended $1.5 billion in loans for classroom construction for public and private colleges. The Senate voted that, plus $900 million for scholarships. The House revised that measure to include grants as well as loans to private colleges, and killed the scholarship provision. On these widely diverging provisions, conferees of the two chambers have been stymied for months.

Pentagon Victor — After all the vehement fulminating in and out of Congress against Defense Secretary McNamara's plan to overhaul the National Guard and Army Reserves and slash them by some 60,000, he has quietly gotten his way. He won this resounding triumph in the $48 billion Defense appropriation bill that Congress finally voted and which has been signed by the President. This huge money measure contains a provision that gives McNamara a wide-open door to put through his proposed reductions of Reserve and National Guard forces. It's an astute formula that outwardly saves the face of Congress, but gives McNamara everything he wants. The author of this wily compromise — Defense Secretary Robert McNamara! . . . The U. S. Army is quietly building up a small and highly mobile "fire brigade" in the Panama Canal Zone for instant action in the event of any overt move in the Caribbean area by Dictator Fidel Castro or other Communists. This unannounced "fire brigade," under Lieutenant General Andrew O'Meara, Caribbean commander - in - chief, comprises elements of all the armed services, with the air and land equipment necessary to transport them.

General George Decker, former Army Chief of Staff, is not following in the footsteps of his two predecessors. Decker has no plans to write a book or articles about his tenure as member of the Joint Chiefs of Staff . . . Brigadier General Godfrey McHugh, White House Air Force aide, is becoming a paratrooper. He has signed up for the Army jump course at Ft. Benning, Ga. . . . Tart story going the rounds in Pentagon corridors: A senior officer, completing a briefing, said briskly, "The Secretary of Defense wants full action on this matter in ten days." Retorted another general, "Isn't the Secretary aware that Rome was not built in a day?" Snapped the briefing officer, "Rome is not on the Secretary's list of priority projects."

Inside You And Yours

Acne's Touchy Skin

By Burton H. Fern, M. D.

Dear Doctor: Our 16-year-old son has bad acne. While relaxing, reading or watching TV, he unconsciously picks his face.

Are we naging too much by reminding him not to?

Mrs. L.. (alif.)

Ask your son; he knows. Soaking with warm, wet cotton instead may head off both physical and psychological scars.

Acne starts when the outer layer of skin grows across oil glands, stopping up pores. Oily secretions convert pores to whiteheads. Dirt darkens them into blackheads.

When bulging glands burst, irritating oil seeps out just below the surface. Now bulging cysts mushroom. Germs creep in and trigger infections that later leave scars.

Treat Promptly

The sooner the treatment, the better the cure!

Brisk — but light — scrubbing helps reopen clogged oil glands. Use a warm, soapy washcloth five minutes twice daily.

Grating soaps live Lava (R) may grind away pore-sealing skin. Ask your druggist about pHisoHex (R) and other germ-killing soaps.

Certain chemicals cause acne. Beware of cobalt, bromine, iodine and vitamin B-12 in food supplements and cold and cough remedies. Check each label carefully.

Swim or hike on hot, sunny days. No sweaty tennis or badminton! New cysts boil as sweat spreads acne.

Avoid These

Nuts, chocolate, sharp cheese and iodine-rich sea foods may irritate oil glands. Avoid them. So many other foods have been blamed, you'd have to starve to be "completely safe".

Give up a few at a time — bacon, fried foods, nuts, pies, pastries and rich desserts—and see which trigger new flare-ups.

Warm Soaks

Warm soaks help heal raw, red cysts. Your doctor may prescribe stronger medicines like giant vitamin A capsules or antibiotic germ-killers. Female hormones help when menstrual flow aggravates acne.

Don't forget to keep hands off! Squeezing or pinching swells cysts and injects scar-making germs.

Acne'd skin is too touchy to touch!

Dear Abby

DEAR ABBY: I have been with the FIRE DEPARTMENT less than a year, and the girl I am going with told me if I want to marry her I had better find something else to do for a living because she refuses to put up with those crazy hours. Should I try to talk her into marrying me anyway, or should I find another job?

ROOKIE

DEAR ROOKIE: Better find another girl. If she's burning to marry you, she won't throw cold water on your job.

DEAR ABBY: Do you recall your answer to a young girl (or maybe it was to her mother) when you were asked to settle the question of when a girl is "her own boss"?

MRS. A. C.

DEAR MRS. A. C.: It may not be verbatim, but this is close: "When a girl leaves her parent's home, pays her own room and board, buys her own clothes, pays for her own dental and medical care, finances her own education and pays for her own entertainment, then she has the privilege of choosing her own company, making all her own decisions and being her own 'boss'."

DEAR ABBY: Not too long ago, I redecorated my living room. It took a lot of time and effort, but when I got through it looked very nice. Now both my neighbors on either side of me have put up wallpaper and drapes exactly like mine! One even asked me where I bought my lamps, and she went down and bought a pair just like them for herself. My husband said I should be flattered. Tell me, honestly, wouldn't you be annoyed if this happened to you?

ANNOYED

DEAR ANNOYED: It HAS happened to me, and I was annoyed at first. But after thinking it over, I was flattered.

Just Between Us — —

—By Bobby Westbrook

I'll never have a syndicated column on household hints, that's for sure, but I do have one personal hint that may save you some embarrassment: Don't take your shoes off when the heat and the humidity both stand in the 90's!

From sad experience I can tell you that you won't get them back on again — no matter how well they fit, unless you have plenty of talcum. Fortunately, I had already had lunch with the Navy at the college, and thoroughly enjoyed the four Navy officers (f) who in addition to their degrees have acquired the happy facility of being interesting table companions.

It was after things started steaming up at the office that I started my modest strip tease: first the earrings, then the necklace and finally the shoes. The reverse process was much more difficult so barefoot as the ugly stepsisters in Cinderella I had to sit and let the news flow in.

Which it did, fortunately, and my vicarious living with my Daily Record family seemed to run the whole gamut of human emotion; joy, pride, compassion and sorrow.

There was the fun of writing up Dorothy May's wedding — although with Dorothy spending the summer working in St. Paul and Harriet busy with her four boys, it was really Jonas May's wedding. And there's one father of the bride who can put hand-wringing mamas and gnat-straining Bridal consultants to shame.

From all reports it was a lovely wedding, and the fact that one of the guests was former Gov. Harold Stassen didn't put anybody in a dither as it well might less solid characters. He was there as uncle of the bridegroom and father of an usher and as such as another welcome guest.

The pride came in reviewing the activities of the Hostetter children over the past year. They, too, have fulfilled the promise of their early years, and should serve as an inspiration to families who would like to have the best for their children but are afraid it's impossible because they don't have the money to hand it to them on a silver platter.

And the sorrow came flooding in with the news of the sudden death of Billy Kraemer in Florida — a sorrow I seem to be sharing with the whole community who knew him.

Miss Dorothy May Is Bride Of Jerome Erickson Here

Miss Dorothy Elizabeth May, daughter of Jonas T. May, Stroudsburg, and the late Cornelia May, was married on Saturday afternoon at 2:30 in the First Presbyterian Church of Stroudsburg, to Jerome Arnold Erickson.

Mr. Erickson is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Arnold Erickson, of South St. Paul, Minn.

Rev. Dr. Peter K. Emmons, Stroudsburg, pastor emeritus of the Westminster Presbyterian Church, Scranton, performed the double ring ceremony. Rhododendron formed the background for the bouquet of white gladiolas. Musical background was provided by Jean Ann Wolbert, organist, and Robert Wolbert, who, as soloist, sang "O Perfect Love" and "The Greatest of These Is Love."

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a ballerina-length gown of white organdy embroidered with sprigs of tiny flowers, with a lattice-work cap with a veil. Her bouquet was of Frenched white carnations and pink sweetheart roses.

The couple were unattended. Serving as ushers were Ronald Erickson, brother of the bridegroom, of Norristown, and a cousin of the bridegroom, Glenn Stassen, of Wayne.

Following the ceremony, a reception for about 30 guests was held in the social room of the church. The buffet table was centered with a three-tier cake and garlanded with greens.

Assisting in the receiving line was the bride's sister, Mrs. Elmer Taylor, of Long Island, who wore a blue figured dress with black accessories and a corsage of yellow Frenched carnations. The bridegroom's mother wore a beige dress with the skirt in darker shade, white accessories and a corsage of yellow Frenched carnations.

The newlyweds are now on a weding trip through the mid-West which will culminate at Boulder, Colo., where they have an apartment.

For traveling the bride wore a cream colored suit with a corsage of roses and carnations.

The bride is a graduate of Macalester College with a teaching fellowship at the University of Colorado at Boulder this fall. Her husband also attended Macalester College, majoring in the physical sciences, and is now stationed at Fort Carson, Colo.

Hostetter Clan Reviews Children's Achievements

The family of Rev. and Mrs. B. H. Hostetter, East Stroudsburg, met for a weekend reunion at the home of Albert and Millie Hostetter of RD 3, Sewickley. For the first time in five years, the entire family was together.

On Friday, a picnic supper was held in the grove adjoining the home. On Saturday, the whole clan of 20 enjoyed a full turkey dinner. In the afternoon, a family concert was held with Bernina at the piano, Sarah playing the flute, David the trombone; Albert the clarinet, Edwin the trumpet and Gordon the bassoon.

The entire group attended Sunday school and church services at the Christian and Missionary Alliance in Ambridge where they occupied special pews reserved for them. Albert conducted the orchestra opening the Sunday school. Rev. B. David Hostetter and Rev. B. H. Hostetter participated in the morning service. On Sunday night, J. Edwin Hostetter, of New York City, sang a solo, accompanied by Sarah, and a quartette including Sarah, David, Albert and Edwin sang during the service.

After Sunday dinner, the host called on each of the adults to give a resume of the past few years and their plans for the future.

Bernina is planning a wedding on Sept. 8. She received her master's degree in organ at Syracuse University this past year following a recital in January. She has been minister of music in the South Presbyterian Church in Syracuse and has also given private organ and piano lessons.

South Presbyterian Church will be the setting of her marriage to Gordon Danielson, of Muskegon, Mich. He received his Ph.D. degree from Syracuse University, is an elder in South Presbyterian Church and a member of the Syracuse Symphony Orchestra.

Edwin Hostetter has been teaching mathematics in New York City and supervising adult education with an enrollment of 800. He is also serving as teller in a bank on weekends. This year he was appointed assistant to the superintendent of schools including the adult education program. He is a deacon in the Free Evangelical Church in New York City where he conducts both the adult and high school choirs.

Children present were Ruth Ann, Edwin, Suzanne and Timothy.

Albert continue his work with the American Bridge Co. in Ambridge where he is senior in the office of estimates. He is an elder in the Christian and Missionary Alliance in Ambridge and conducts the orchestra and choir as well as teaching a Sunday school class.

His children are Nathan Joel, Stephen Mark and Faith Naomi.

Rev. B. David Hostetter is minister of the Presbyterian Church in St. John, New Brunswick. In the past year he has served as president of the Ministerial Assn. in St. John, conducts a panel on a television program and also serves as a chaplain in the Navy in the Maritime Provinces. He is in the midst of a building program for a new church.

Children are Bonnie Jean and David.

Sarah, the youngest, has spent the summer at the University of Indiana, Bloomington, where she was taking graduate work in music. Last year she was assistant to Dr. Robert Wood, head of the music department, and is returning to Houghton College to serve in the same capacity under Dr. Charles Finney, and to teach piano.

She is also expecting to return as minister of music in the Perry Baptist Church.

Father of the clan, Rev. B. H. Hostetter this year resigned as pastor of the local Christian and Missionary Alliance Church and also sold the Church Supply and Gift Shop he operated. He and Mrs. Hostetter plan to visit their children and travel, and Mr. Hostetoter will supply pulpits where there is a demand.

Snowflake Not Melting On Hot Christening

Fortunately the fate of a snowball in Hades seems unlikely to befall Snowflake at the Wild Animal Farm, but it was the hottest day of the summer for a christening.

Snowflake is the llama, born July 26, and made her public debut in pictures in The Daily Record peering between her mother's leg — rear view. There was a reason for this since Mama is the same llama who a few years ago gave Daily Record's photographer pro tem, Leonard Randolph, the full treatment of llama saliva at bullet speed right in the face.

Snowflake has been one of the leading attractions at the farm this summer and a naming contest attracted many entires with four ties for first place. In the run-off Snowflake was the name chosen over Fluffy, Powderpuff and Heidi in that order.

Yesterday, Snowflake, remembering her South American ancestry, seemed in no danger of melting away, although the rest of the populace seemed on the point of.

Skirts Don't Disqaulify Naval Personnel As Gentlemen, Scholars

Outside speakers addressing the Naval Reserve Seminar now being held at East Stroudsburg State College are sometimes thrown into confusion. "Gentlemen" — they begin, and then catching sight of a lone white cap in the sea of Navy tan—add a belated and confused "and Lady."

Actually they have no cause for concern since in the eyes of the Government of the United States, the four women attending the seminar are officially "gentlemen."

Not officially but actually they also rate the title of "scholar", as well. In combination the degrees they hold practically span the alphabet: BA's, MA's, BS's, RN's, LL.B's, LL.m's, and PH.D's, among them.

In the pilot seminar held last Summer there was one lone woman officer attending; this Summer there are four sharing the two week's of concentrated leadership training.

Honorary Submariner

For Lt. Commander Mildred B. Mitchell of Dayton, Ohio, being the only woman in the group is a commonplace. As a matter of fact she is one of the few women to hold the rank of honorary Submariner, as the only woman aboard in a research capacity during test dives.

Commander Mitchell received her B. A. from Rockford College, her M. A. from Radcliffe, and her PH. D from Yale. During the war she was with the Bureau of Naval Personnel, of the U. S. Naval Hospital at Bethesda and N. T. C., Bronx.

Now research psychologist at the Wright-Patterson Airforce Base in Dayton, she is associated with a research unit in Dayton, Ohio.

Test Astronauts

One of the fascinating phases of her work has been as part of the team which selected the American Astronauts. Commander Mitchell would test applicants immediately before and immediately after their trials of 130 degree heat, high altitude, spinning, testing qualities of physical endurance as well as skill, intelligence and emotional stability.

In addition to her regular job and Naval Reserve duties, Dr. Mitchell also devotes one evening a week to volunteer work at a Home for Women Alcoholics in Dayton.

Lt. Lillian C. McLaurin of Arlington, Va., and Lt. Zelda Carof of Atlantic City are line officers in the Naval Reserve.

Law-Librarian

Lt. McLaurin holds degrees as bachelor of arts, bachelor of law, bachelor of science and master of law, and is a lawyer-librarian with the Tax Court of the United States in Washington, D. C. During the war she served with the Judge Advocate Generals Office in Washington, D. C.

Lt. Zelda Carof of Atlantic City, N. J., is a teacher, holding a bachelor of arts degree from New York University; master of education from Temple University, and, another rare distinction for a woman, a certificate in meteorology from the Massachusetts Institute of Technology.

It was this training as Aerologist meteorologist which landed her the post of Aerologist at the Naval Air Station at Norfolk, Va. She also was information and education officer on the staff of the Commander Naval Forces in the Far East and Navy Representative to USAFI in Japan. Her Navy duty also included serving as communications officer at the Naval Station in San Diego.

Seagoing Sailor

In the Naval Reserves she is training officer at composite company in Atlantic City. Her hobbies are golf and reading.

Golf is a hobby she shares with Lt. Sara Squier of Binghamton, N. Y., the only member of the quartette with sea-going duty—not counting submarines. Lt. Squier is in the Navy Nurse Corps. Now a school nurse, teacher, Lt. Squier holds an R. N. degree from Wilson Memorial Hospital School of nursing and both her bachelor of science and master of arts degree from Columbia University Teachers College.

During the war she had sea duty in the Military Sea Transport Service and shore duty at Naval Hospitals at Bainbridge, Md., and Camp Perry, Va.

Now she is appropriate duty officer at the U. S. Naval and Marine Corps Reserve Training Center at Binghamton, N. Y.

In addition to her golf, which she has had a chance to try out at courses in the Poconos, Lt. Squier's hobbies include photography and bowling.

With varying backgrounds, occupations and interests, the four "gentlemen" in the trim blue and white striped uniforms seem to share a common enthusiam for the navy and their own part in its reserves—as well as a heavy schedule of classes during the two-week seminar.

One of the major bonus benefits of being women in a predominately male group is that they should have no lack of dancing partners at the closing dinner meeting to be held Thursday night at Water Gap Country Club.

THE WYCKOFF SHOPPER

This is a column I had been hoping to write for some time, but until the story broke in the news columns of our Daily Record the other morning, I was not free to speak. It is a column meant as the highest possible tribute to someone who did much for me and to whom I am deeply appreciative, Dorothy Lisette.

There was a time, when I was a great deal younger, that Miss Lisette was a very important factor in my life. She was my vocal teacher, and at least once a week (sometimes more) I visited her studio and suffered through a half hour of scales, which I detested, before she would permit me to sing the songs I loved. In those days, I sang a great deal . . . in the choir . . . in recitals . . . before organizations, and in many churches.

My sessions with Dorothy were always a delight. She had at that time, as I am sure she still does, a roguish sense of humor. When one's voice broke on a note, or one became tongue-tied on a particularly difficult phrasing, she always had some ridiculous comment that never failed to break me up. Looking back, it seems I laughed a great deal then, and so did she. In all, I studied eight years with her—not because I had a rare voice or intended to use it as a livelihood, but because I enjoyed my studies; I was learning to appreciate good music, and I was being brought face to face with new situations that broadened my understanding.

Until Dorothy took me in hand, I had no poise at all. I was nervous, tense, and afraid of people. Don't laugh! No one can possibly know the agony I endured as a young newspaper reporter when it was necessary for me to talk with a stranger even by telephone. I suffered torment every time I had to enter a room filled with thirty or forty club members, many of whom I didn't know, and I lived in dread of standing up in a spotlight however small and even uttering my name.

Vocal lessons changed all this. Dorothy taught me my songs, how to stand, and how to cope with anything unusual that occurred during my performance . . . and before I knew it, I discovered that people aren't monsters at all. They are rather wonderful, and it can be a real pleasure to talk with them or before them. This is a lesson some men and women never learn, and everytime I see one of them, stammering and unhappy before an assembly, I am grateful all over again for my studies with Dorothy.

Today I do not sing. But I do speak before people and I have a radio program. Yet whenever anyone says, "I enjoy hearing your program—your voice is very pleasant," I am grateful for Dorothy's training. She did not teach me to hold my tongue as often as I might . . . but she did teach me how to enunciate clearly, how to phrase, and a number of other things equally important.

With marriage, moving away, and motherhood, the teacher-pupil relationship ended, but often I have wished my own daughter might study with her and learn the many worthwhile things any good vocal teacher can offer. I only regret that Maura will never have the pleasure of knowing Dorothy's parents, Pierre and Minnie Lisette, who were among the most dignified, refined, and charming people I have ever known.

Today Dorothy is ill and has suffered the loss of a leg. Her friends have established a fund, through this newspaper, to tide her over the months of inactivity. Proud though she is, I am sure she realizes the motive is one of fond friendship and good will. When I think of the countless songs she has sung without remuneration before local clubs, and the classes she has had to cancel to do so; when I think of all the pleasure she has given others with her own beautiful voice, I feel that whatever we do now is somehow not enough.

Packer Coach Not Happy With Playing Of Hornung

GREEN BAY, Wis. (AP) — Green Bay Packer coach Vince Lombardi says he's not satisfied with the play of Paul Hornung, the National Football League scoring leader the last three years and the loop's most valuable player last season.

And halfback Hornung says he isn't very pleased with his performance in the Packers' 41-14 victory over the St. Louis Cardinals in an NFL exhibition at Jacksonville, Fla., last Saturday night.

The triumph was the third preseason conquest for the defending NFL champions, but after the game, Lombardi said:

"We weren't very sharp in our blocking, and I'm not very satisfied with Hornung's play, although I don't know who to blame, Hornung or the offensive line.

"You certainly can't blame Hornung if the holes didn't open. We'll know more after checking the movies."

Hornung said his play was "the worst game I've had in many years. My left leg still gives me some trouble and I've got to get it in shape."

The driving Hornung gained only 11 yards in eight carries and his string of successive extra points was broken at 93.

While Lombardi and Hornung were searching for causes, Card Coach Wally Lemm offered a possibility.

"Green Bay plays a solid game," he said. "They just knock the stuffing out of you. Sure, we stopped Hornung, but we didn't stop the rest of them."

He admitted the Cardinal defense was "physically beaten."

The rest of them mentioned by Lemm included fullback Jim Taylor, quarterback Bart Starr and the Packer defense.

Taylor plunged for three touchdowns and dented the Cardinal defense for 49 yards in 16 carries. Starr directed the Packers to two touchdowns in the first 10 minutes, and one of his aerials went for a touchdown.

The tough Packer defense contributed directly to three Green Bay touchdowns, defensive backs Willie Wood and Jessie Whittenton running back interceptions for scores. Linebacker Ray Nitschke set up a third TD with another interception.

Kansas City Rallies In 4th To Dump Yankees 7-3

KANSAS CITY (AP) — Roger Maris slammed a three-run homer for the New York Yankees in the first inning Monday but their attack sputtered out after that and the Kansas City Athletics defeated the American League leaders 7-3.

The Athletics started their rally in the fourth inning when they scored two runs.

In the fifth, with the score 6-3, Bud Daley replaced starter and loser Roland Sheldon (6-8) and closed out the inning. He blanked the A's through the seventh. In the eighth Jim Coates gave up the final run on a homer by Jerry Lumpe.

Ed Rakow started for the Athletics and gained his 12th victory against 13 losses. John Wyatt took over in the seventh inning and finished.

'Little Champs' Seek 3rd Title

MONTERREY, Mex. (AP) — The "little champions' of Monterrey, baseball pride of this industrial capital of Northern Mexico, will seek their third Little League world championship at Williamsport, Pa., this week.

This will be their fifth visit to the Little League baseball capital since 1957, when they first were crowned as world champions.

Except for two 11-year-olds, the rest are 12. They are all sons of workers who labor at Vidreira Monterrey, the bigest Mexican industrial glass combine.

The Latin American champions of 1962 left behind an impressive record for the last six games they played here, in the National and Latin-American tournament by scoring 72 runs against only nine for their rivals.

FAMILY RACTION

PITTSBURGH (AP) — How does the family of a baseball manager react to victory and defeat?

"Our children never say a word to their father when the Pittsburgh Pirates lose a game," says Mrs. Kathleen Murtaugh.

"It was more noticeable when they were young," adds Danny Murtaugh. "When my team won they'd greet me at the door and climb all over me. When we lost, they weren't anywhere to be seen.

Scotrun Golfer Scores An Ace

CLAIR Peechatka of Scotrun is perhaps the proudest golfer in this area today.

After 20 years of playing, Peechatka, who is now 57, used a No. 5 iron on the 155-yard 10th hole at Mt. Manor golf course to score a hole in one.

Describing the feat as his "greatest thrill," Peechatka declared, "I never thought I'd live to see the day I'd do that."

LONG BUNT

PITTSBURGH (AP) — Someone asked Dick Stuart, the big slugging first sacker of the Pittsburgh Pirates, if he can bunt.

"Did I ever bunt while playing for the Pirates," he said. "Why sure. I remember bunting two different times. Good, too.

"Once I bunted so hard it went past the second baseman for a hit before he could get set."

Phillies Beat Houston, 7-1 In First Tilt

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — The Philadelphia Phillies defeated Houston 7-1 in the first game of a scheduled twi-night doubleheader Monday night for their 13th victory in 13 meetings with the Colts.

The second game was postponed by a power failure after a violent thunderstorm before play got under way. The two teams will meet in a twinight doubleheader Tuesday.

Wes Covington and Clay Dalrymple hit back-to-back home runs in the Phillies' half of the fifth inning after two were out.

Houston left 12 men stranded on the bases in the free-hitting game but the only run the Colts were able to score off Dallas Green was in the third, when Norm Larker doubled and Roman Mejias and Bob Aspromante singled. Green is now 6-5.

Starter Dick Farrell was charged with the loss, his 16th in 24 decisions.

Cuban Team Official To Seek Asylum

KINGSTON, Jamaica (AP) — An official of the Cuban delegation to the Central American and Caribbean Games was reported by friends Monday to be in hiding and seeking political asylum in the United States.

He was identified as Jose Raul Grande, second in command of the Cuban team as vice secretary of the Cuban Olympic Committee. Eight Cubans already have defected since the games opened Aug. 11.

Friends said Grande had telephoned Avery Brundage, president of the International Olympic Committee, charging that the Cuban government planted secret police with the Cuban team.

Meanwhile, Cubans returning home from the Games issued countercharges that the competition was plagued by U.S. intelligence agents and counter revolutionaries.

Line Material Wins Opener In Playoffs

SORING six runs in the first inning, Line Material notched the first game of a best two-of-three playoff series yesterday, edging Kulp's 7-6, at Kulp's Field.

Second of the three-game set is scheduled for tonight at Kulp's Field starting at 6:15 p.m.

Doubles by Biondo, Plesh, Phillips and Cavanaugh, and a triple by Hopkins were the big blows in Line Material's win. A triple by Johnson was the only extra-base hit for the losers.

Kulp's took a quick 4-0 lead in the top half of the first inning but Line Material overcame the deficit with six tallies in the same frame.

Mauch Rehired By Phillies

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — The Philadelphia Phillies rehired Manager Gene Mauch Monday for another year. Salary terms of the contract—which the front office called an extension of the old one —were not disclosed.

The 36-year-old Mauch, who played the infield for Chicago in the National League and Boston in the American, was first hired as Phils field manager after the start of the 1960 campaign. After the disastrous season last year—the Phils finished last in the old eight club setup and in mid-season lost 23 games in a row—there were some who expected Mauch would not be engaged for '62.

TALENTED SONS

LOUISVILLE, Ky. (AP) — The 1-2-3 horses in the first race at Miles Park recently — Fair Tip, Hermo's Tip and Blue Topper — all are sons of the same sire, Timely Tip.

Timely Tip was 14th in the 1954 Kentucky Derby, won by Determine.

T. Davis Heading For Two Crowns

By BEN OLAN
Associated Press Sports Writer

NEW YORK (AP)—At the rate he's going, Tommy Davis of the Los Angeles Dodgers is likely to achieve two distinctions this season—win the National League batting title and become the first player in 25 years to drive in 150 runs in the senior circuit.

The hard-hitting outfielder regained the batting lead Sunday after losing it earlier in the week. Davis collected nine hits in 26 tries in last week's games and his average remained at .345. He also lifted his runs batted in total to 121. The last National Leaguer to drive in at least 150 runs was Joe Medwick of the Cardinals in 1937.

Frank Robinson of Cincinnati, the runner-up in RBI's with 111, also moved into second place in the batting competition. He climbed one notch on a two-point gain to .343. Robinson had nine hits in 23 trips.

Hank Aaron of Milwaukee also advanced one place to third as a result of a seven-point increase to .342. Aaron had 12 safeties in 26 times at bat. Stan Musial of St. Louis tumbled two places to fourth. The veteran outfielder had only one hit in nine at bats. His average is .335.

Pete Runnels of Boston continued the consistent pace that is likely to bring his second American League title. Runnels stroked 10 hits in 30 tries and his average remained at .330.

Meanwhile, rookie Manny Jimenez of Kansas City slumped three points to .321 with a 4-for-17 performance. The figures include Sunday's games.

Rich Rollins of the Minnesota Twins jumped two places to third on a two point gain to .310. The young third baseman turned in an 11-for-33 showing. Chuck Hinton of Washington remained fourth at .309 while Kansas City's Norm Siebern moved up one position to fifth at .308. Siebern gained four points with 10 hits in 26 times at bat.

Harmon Killebrew of Minnesota tied Norm Cash of Detroit for the home run lead while moving into first place in the runs batted in race. Killebrew hit two homers, giving him 32 for the campaign. The Twins' slugger drove in 11 runs and lifted his total to 91.

Willie Mays of San Francisco continues to lead the National League in homers with 38. He hit three last week.

Miss Albers, 15 Snaps Golf Mark In U. S. Juniors

BUFFALO, N. Y. (AP) — Roberta Albers, a 15-year-old golfing prodigy with nerves of a tournament veteran, broke the women's record at the Country Club of Buffalo Monday with a 74 and won the qualifying medal of the 14th U. S. Golf Association Girls Junior Championship.

Miss Albers, of Temple Terrace, Fla., tore into the country club's back nine with a 1-under-par 35. The 6,102-yard, par 72 course posed virtually no threat to the 5-foot-4 youngster. The old competitive record for women was 75.

Five strokes off the pace as the field of 115 was trimmed to 32 for Tuesday's first round of match play was another pre-tourney favorite, Ann Baker of Maryville, Tenn. She needed two long putts on the back nine to save her 79.

The 80 bracket included Mary Lou Daniel of Louisville, Ky., comedalist with Miss Baker a year ago.

Miss Albers, who reached the semifinals of the national women's amateur last year at 14, banged in a 10-foot birdie putt on the long 13th and put away a 5-footer for a deuce on the 155-yard 16th.

NAMED FOR HORSE

LEXINGTON, Ky. (AP) — A lot of race horses are named after people, but not many people are named after horses.

Dr. Robert Copelan, a veterinary surgeon, named his daughter Jane Gail, after the dam of 1952 Kentucky Derby winner Hill Gail.

Copelan broke and galloped Hill Gail at Calumet Farm near here.

Riegel Fires Record 67 In Penna. Open

By JACK LYNCH

HERSHEY, Pa. (AP) — Skee Riegel of Philadelphia's Old York Road Club fired a record breaking 67 Monday to grab a commanding three stroke lead in the 46th Pennsylvania State Open Golf Tournament.

Riegel, 47-year-old two-time winner of the tournament, clipped six strokes from par 36-37—73 to establish the new record for the Hershey Country Club's 6,929 yard layout.

The $2,750 tournament ends Tuesday with another 18-hole round.

Henry Williams of Berkleigh, the 1954 winner, had to settle for a three way tie for second at 70 after taking a double bogey five on the 184-yard 18th hole. Sharing second place with Williams were Paul Kelly of Marion and Tommy Murphy of Lancaster.

Art Wall of Pocono Manor and defending State Open Champ Al Besselink of Philmont, barely made the cut.

The field of 154 starters was trimmed to the low 50 scorers who shot 76 or under to make Tuesday's finale.

Wall, the 1959 Masters champion playing in this event and on this course for the first time, carded a 74, Besselink a 75.

Area Gridders Preparing For Start Of New Season

IT'S THE cleats-for-spikes season and sportsmen everywhere can denote the terminology as the start of a new football season.

Refreshed, and with all the enthusiasm of young colts, the area high school and colleges will gradually head into a solid training program. The kickoff was Saturday for the area high schools, but the real plan of action gets underway this week.

To some people it may seem early, but to the coaches and gridders, it can't start too soon.

Most of the schools will open their campaigns on Sept. 14 — which is about four weeks away. Others will start a bit later and some a week earlier.

Come September, however, the gridders should be in the thick of training.

For the coaches, the season got "under way" months ago, as they planned, viewed and reviewed movies of past action. It will be the beginning of more actual conditioning of players and determining their various degrees of ability.

In the first few days, the squad are unusually large in number. But by the end of the week, a few are missing from the program.

For the most part, however, the group remains intact and the head coaches (with some aid from his assistants) begins the other problems of narrowing the unit. All this the coaches could not do earlier.

It is their idea to group the candidates around the "plan-of-action". Each coach has his own. If the material is there, then the mentor will probably obtain his chief aim — a successful season!

The preliminaries — physicals, equipment distribution, check ups, minor problems, etc. — have gone by. The big motion of taking shape now begins.

Sept. 7 is the target date for Pius X of Roseto when they open with Bristol.

On Sept. 8 sees Pocono Mt. Joint Schools open a junior varsity program against Pen Argyl JVs.

But Sept. 14, a Friday, is the initial encounter for most of the schools.

Pen Argyl High plays Muhlenberg; Stroud Union meets Lehighton and East Stroudsburg tangles with Slatington.

The season runs through Thanksgiving Day — a time when the coaches can reflect on what took place. But it will be too late to make changes then. This is why they must start taking form now. The foundation of their grid season will most likely determine their full program.

East Stroudsburg State opens at home Sept. 15 when they entertain Montclair.

Pleasant Valley High School, awaiting 1963 when it will turn for a full varsity program, plays host to Pen Argyl JVs Sept. 15 in a game scheduled to get underway at 2 p.m.

Seeds Tested For Noxious Content

ALL seeds offered for sale in Pennsylvania must be labeled as to variety or kind of seed, purity, germination percentage, and noxious weed seeds present.

County Agent John Withrow lists these noxious weeds in Pennsylvania: dodder, horse nettle, wild garlic, wild onion, perennial sow thistle, bedstraw, corncockle, buckhorn plantain (aslo known as ripple), Johnsongrass, and wild mustard. Limited amounts of these weed seeds are permitted. However, it is unlawful to sell, or offer for sale, any seed which contains bindweed, Canada thistle or quackgrass seeds.

Any Pennsylvania farmer who wants to sell homegrown alfalfa, clover, or timothy seed should have a five ounce sample tested Each sample must represent the lot of seed to be sold. Send the sample to the Seed Laboratory, Department of Agriculture, Bureau of Plant Industry, Harrisburg, Pennsylvania. Purity analysis, noxious weed seed examination, and germination tests are made there. You must pay a $1.50 fee for the purity and weed seed examination, and $1.00 for the germination test. Allow 30 days for the test.

Withrow urges farmers to be sure to place their name and address on the sample, the name of the seed, the year grown, and a statement showing the kind of tests wanted. Make fee payment by check or money order to the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania.

Danny Kaye shows how we can help visitors from abroad enjoy their stay here

You know what I've discovered on my recent trips abroad? That more and more people overseas are planning visits to America! They are coming here on business, as students—and on vacation. I think this is great news, not only because it will give them a chance to learn what America is really like—but also because it gives us the opportunity to return the hospitality and kindness shown to Americans overseas. There are many, many practical ways you can be helpful to visitors. Some of them are shown below—but what it all adds up to is extending the courtesy and interest traditional with Americans. Even if you meet someone who doesn't speak our language, there are things you can do to make friends. The expression on your face, the tone of your voice, and your attitude can show that you want to be helpful. I use this kind of "language" all over the world.

Help visitors save time.
Time is so important to travelers. Give them tips to avoid delays—how and where to get tickets to theaters and special events ahead of time; which stores have the things they want; which bus or train will take them to certain landmarks most quickly; the fastest routes.

Help them spend wisely.
Your thoughtfulness in directing visitors to places within their budget (restaurants, hotels, etc.) will be remembered. You can usually find out in a diplomatic way what price range they're looking for. Hints about travelers' checks, tipping practices and making change help, too.

Show interest in their children.
Parents are the same the world over—they appreciate the extra attention shown their children. I don't know much about psychology, but I do get along pretty well with kids. You'll find, as I have, that a smile, a handshake, a little compliment work wonders.

Show where to get advice.
If you can't answer a question, chances are you can direct the visitors to the proper source of information—tell them about Travelers Aid, for example; or state and local vacation bureaus, the Chamber of Commerce and all the many free touring services available.

Add to the fun.
I'm supposed to be something of an expert in making people laugh and have fun. But there's no secret formula. I think we can all help visitors enjoy themselves if we show them we're interested in helping them find out about our way of life, our humor and pastimes, and our traditions.

Give them travel ideas.
Tourists can't really get the feel of our country just by visiting the obvious sights. Suggest some of the wonderful hidden-away places that you've discovered. If you can do it, invite the visitors you meet to stay awhile, to see your town, your home, get to know your family.

Dr. Kundzins To Succeed Archbishop

NEW YOR K— Dr. Karlis Kundzins, 79, of Seattle, Wash., will succeed the late Archbishop Teodors Grunbergs as head of the Latvian Evangelical Lutheran Church in Exile, it was reported here.

Officials of the church said the late archbishop, who died at the age of 92 last June 14 in Esslingen, Germany, had designated Dr. Kundzins to be his successor. Dr. Kundzins has been a deputy archbishop of the body, which has some 120,00 members and congregations in several countries.

It was reported installation services for Dr. Kundzins are tentatively scheduled Oct. 7 at the Latvian Lutheran church in Washington, D..

Dr. Kundzins, a former professor of New Testament and dean of the Faculty of Theology at the University of Riga in Latvia, has been a pastor at Seattle since 1951. He left Latvia in 1944 when the Soviet Union occupied the country and spent the intervening years in Germany, where ecclesiastical headquarters for exiled Latvian Lutherans were established at Esslingen.

Argentine Army Leaders Warned

WASHINGTON (AP)—The United States in effect told rebellious Argentine army leaders Friday it would disapprove of any military coup against the government of President Jose Maria Guido.

"We do not look with favor on military coups against constitutional democratic governments," State Department press office Joseph W. Reap told a news conference.

Reap declined to comment directly on news dispatches from Buenos Aires reporting that the United States has warned Argentina rebel generals against dictatorship.

"The U.S. position is well-known to be within the framework of inter-American commitment and the Alliance for Progress," he said.

One of the aims of the Alliance for Progress, Reap said, is "to improve and strengthen democratic institutions through the application of self-determination by the people."

Van Zandt Lauds Reserves

ERIE, Pa. (AP) — U.S. Rep. James E. Van Zandt praised Sunday the efforts of the military reservists called to active duty last year during the inflamed Berlin crisis.

His praise was contained in remarks prepared for homecoming ceremonies honoring Erie's Battery C, 5th Howitzer Bn., 43rd Artillery, following its release after 10 months of active duty.

Van Zandt, the Republican candidate for U.S. senator, said the Berlin crisis "could have either touched off World War III with all its attendant horrors — or would perhaps have cowed the West into submission."

GDS Fair Will Feature Popular Folk Music Duo

The Louvin Brothers

NEWFOUNDLAND — A couple of farm boys from Henegar, Alabama, will reign as "kings of the fair" when the Greene-Dreher-Sterling Community Fair opens on August 29 at the fairgrounds in the 45th season.

They are one of the most popular and versatile groups in the country music field today: The Louvin Brothers, Ira and Charlie.

Their appearance at the band shell in Newfoundland will be on Thursday, August 30, with a country music jamboree.

Just breaking into show business popularity at the outbreak of World War II, they made their first showing by winning a talent contest in Chattanooga, Tennessee. At the time, they shared their working hours between farming and singing.

After the war, when the boys were reunited, they had their first big break when Smiling Eddie Hill signed them for Radio Station WNOX's "Mid Day Merry Go Round." But Charlie was recalled into the army at the outbreak of the Korean War.

Their original song compositions brought their success as soon as they were again together. At the time, they were working in the post office and doubling on their own radio show.

The Louvin Brothers are "triple treat" artists. They are talented singers, noted songwriters, and are entertaining at all times.

Today, both Ira and Charlie live near Nashville, and appear on WSM's Grand Ole Opry, while not touring throughout the United States and Canada.

They have received many awards and citations from the music industry. They have been chosen favorite country and western small vocal group, the best sacred group, the most programmed vocal group, and the best new singing group. And they have received citations for writing "I Take the Chance," "Cash on the Barrelhead," and "When I Stop Dreaming."

At the fair, they'll be singing everything from rock 'n roll to pops, from toe-tappin' tunes to sacred melodies. They'll bring "Love Songs From the Hills;" "The Stagger;" "Nellie Moved to Town;" "Blue From Now On," and many other favorites to the 45th annual Greene-Dreher-Sterling Community Fair, one of the oldest community fairs in the country.

Religion Editor Heads News Office Of The ALC

MINNEAPOLIS, Minn — The Rev. Lester F. Heins, fulltime religion editor of the Toledo (Ohio) Blade for the past six years, has been named director of the Department of Public Information of the American Lutheran Church.

The appointment of Mr. Heins, a pastor of the ALC, was announced here by Dr. Norman A. Menter of Berkley, Mich., the denomination's vice president and chairman of its public relations committee.

Mr. Heins assumed his duties on August 1 as successor to Howard Sandum, who resigned early this year to become assistant religious books editor for the Macmillan Company in New York City. Mr. Sandum had held the post since the ALC was established Jan. 1, 1961 by merger of the former Evangelical Lutheran Church, the old ALC and the United Evangelical Lutheran Church.

When Mr. Heins became religion editor of the Toledo Blade in 1956 he returned to the newspaper on which be began his career 27 years earlier. Born in rural Curtice, Ohio, on May 2, 1911, he was hired as a Blade copy boy late in 1929 after his graduation from high school and went on the staff as a regular reporter in 1933. He spent the next eight years on general assignment and filling in on police, federal, courthouse and labor beats. Then he left the newspaper to join the public relations department of Owens-Illinois Glass Co.

He was 35 and a family man when he decided to switch careers and enter the ministry. The ALC's Seminary at Capital University in Columbus, O., arranged a concentrated course of specialized study for him, combining academic work with theology. To support his family, he worked part-time at the Wartburg Publishing House.

Ordained in 1949, Mr. Heins served as the organizing pastor of a mission congregation in Wayne, Mich.

In 1954 he became associate pastor of St. Paul's Lutheran church in Toledo, where he will be installed formally in his new position on Sept. 23, with Dr. Menter officiating.

Mr. Heins has also been public relations director for the Lutheran Welfare Service of Northwestern Ohio and while religion editor of the Blade has served part-time as chaplain of St. Luke's Hospital in Toldeo.

In 1960 he made a 25,00-mile air journey into Africa, Asia and the Middle East to obtain a report-in-depth on the progress and problems of the overseas missions of American churches. In 1961 he was one of the American newspapermen to cover the Third Assembly of the World Council of Churches in New Delhi. India. He has also covered many major church conventions in the United States.

The Daily Investor

Dollar Averaging

By William A. Doyle

Q. I am impressed by your frequent statements that dollar averaging is an excellent method of investing. I have devised what I feel is a variation of dollar averaging and would like your opinion. I would invest in the same stock every three months.

I would start by investing $300. Then, when the subquent times to invest came due, I would never invest more than $300 if the market price of the stock was higher than it was when I made my first investment. But if the market price was lower than it was when I made my first investment, I would invest more than $300. I would also reinvest all the dividends I received. What do you think of this idea?

A. It's not pure dollar averaging, that's for sure. Straight dollar averaging involves putting the same amount of money into the same stock at fixed intervals.

Here's a point on which many people seem to be confused. Whether you invest your fixed amounts of money once a month, once every three months, once a year or on any other steady schedule, you are still dollar averaging. As a matter of fact, it usually costs less in commissions to save your money and make a somewhat larger investment at less frequent intervals than it does to make smaller investments at frequent intervals.

The key to dollar averaging, of course, is that you buy fewer shares when prices are high and more shares when prices are low. In the long run, you have made your purchases at a better than average price. And assuming that the stock doesn't become a complete flop, you come out ahead.

Your idea gets away from straight dollar averaging somewhat. By increasing your investments when prices are low you would be buying more shares at low prices. If you stick with your program, you might do even better than you would by straight dollar averaging.

Q. I became interested in the stock market several years ago. At first I tried to be what you call a "hot-shot trader" by a lot of buying and selling, buying and selling. I lost a lot of money. Then I tried to outsmart the stock market by following various theories advanced by so-called sophisticated investors who use charts and complicated theories. I lost even more money.

I am now convinced that I should forget about trying to make a killing and that I should start a steady investment program through dollar averaging. But I feel that I should never make any investments during the periods from November 16 through February 14 and from June 16 to August 14—on the theory that those periods historically have been periods of high stock prices. Am I correct?

A. You'll never know until you start your steady investment program. It seems that you are still sticking to the chartwork and theories which cost you money.

It's true that there have been "summer rallies" and "year-end rallies" in the stock market in more years than not. In many years those rallies did take place during the period you mention.

But don't go out on a limb and place your bets that this pattern will continue in the future.

Suppose we look at this year. The two-week period immediately following June 16 was the period of the lowest prices that stocks in general reached all year.

My advice to you is to forget about ups and downs of stock prices and go ahead with a steady investment program through dollar averaging.

(Mr. Doyle will answer only representative letters of general interest in his column. He cannot answer phone queries.)
